Parent Engagement and Student Success

Across fifty different studies on parental engagement, educational researchers found a connection between family involvement and academic achievement.[6] And the earlier educators establish parent engagement, the more effective they are in raising student performance. Parent partnerships formed during elementary school years build a strong foundation for student success and future engagement opportunities.[7]

Parent engagement also decreases chronic absenteeism, or missing more than twenty days of a school year. When teachers engaged with parents through home visits, for example, student absences dropped by 20%.[12] Even after accounting for grade level and previous absences, students with engaged parents report less days of school missed overall.[13] Two-way communication between parents and teachers commits students to daily attendance and raises class participation levels.

Students aren't the only ones who benefit from family engagement: parents and teachers do, too. Teachers can prepare parents to help with homework or academic concepts. And engaged parents tend to think highly of teachers, which improves teacher morale. Knowing more about a student's family life can also help teachers prepare lessons that better fit that student's needs or interact more efficiently with families. And because students receive more support, classrooms with engaged parents perform better as a whole.[14] When parents and teachers team up, everyone wins!

Participación de los padres y éxito estudiantil

A través de cincuenta estudios diferentes sobre la participación de los padres, los investigadores educativos encontraron una conexión entre la participación familiar y el rendimiento académico. [6] Y cuanto antes establezcan los educadores la participación de los padres, más efectivos serán para aumentar el rendimiento de los estudiantes. Las asociaciones de padres formadas durante los años de la escuela primaria construyen una base sólida para el éxito de los estudiantes y las oportunidades de participación en el futuro.[7]

La participación de los padres también reduce el ausentismo crónico o la falta de más de veinte días del año escolar. Cuando los maestros se comprometieron con los padres a través de visitas domiciliarias, por ejemplo, las ausencias de los estudiantes se redujeron en un 20 %.[12] Incluso después de tener en cuenta el nivel de grado y las ausencias anteriores, los estudiantes con padres comprometidos reportan menos días de escuela perdidos en general.[13] La comunicación bidireccional entre padres y maestros compromete a los estudiantes a la asistencia diaria y eleva los niveles de participación en clase.

Los estudiantes no son los únicos que se benefician de la participación familiar: los padres y los maestros también. Los maestros pueden preparar a los padres para ayudar con la tarea o los conceptos académicos. Y los padres comprometidos tienden a pensar muy bien en los maestros, lo que mejora la moral de los maestros. Saber más sobre la vida familiar de un estudiante también puede ayudar a los maestros a preparar lecciones que se adapten mejor a las necesidades de ese estudiante o a interactuar de manera más eficiente con las familias. Y debido a que los estudiantes reciben más apoyo, las aulas con padres comprometidos funcionan mejor en general.[14] Cuando los padres y los maestros se unen, ¡todos ganan!

Medical Academy

Debate Field Trip

In December, the students of Ms. Cunard's Debate Class from South Fort Myers High traveled to The Sidney & Berne Davis Art Center to join with The Lee County Bar Association for a field trip. The students enjoyed a day of Q&A from a variety of elite legal professionals, such as the Honorable Judge Robert Branning, Francine Donnorummo with the State Attorney Office, Asma Anwar from the Public Defenders Office, and the Honorable Ita Neymotin with Regional Counsel. These kids will be mentees in the LCBA Diversity & Inclusion Mentor Program. Thank you to Kelly L Fayer, P.A. and Ita Neymotin who co-sponsored lunch for the kiddos as well! Thank you to all who came out to speak to this amazing class of unique kids.

Agriculture

Ms. Sukovich's Agriculture students enjoyed hands-on activities at the Agriculture Forum at Florida Gulf Coast University. Students had the opportunity to speak with many agriculture based companies about employment and career opportunities. Students enjoyed sitting in a tractor from Creel Tractor and tasting ice cream made by an FGCU chemistry class. They were also treated to lots of take aways including hats from Alico Citrus, their own microgreen grow kit and even a full bag of fresh produce from US Sugar!

Hospitality

Mrs. Schultz has been getting our Hospitality students involved with the community and the great events that they are hosting. Hospitality was invited to work the Wreath Event, assist with catering at the Edison Ford Estates in December as well as the Freshman Success visits in our school. The students are loving the Hospitality Academy and all of the new experiences that go along with it. SFM Wolfpack is so blessed to have them representing our school.

What's Happening in the Wolfpack World of Education

Fun In Physics: The Naked-Egg Drop Experiment

Dr. Palaia's students have learned how a dropped egg will break if it hits a hard surface like the floor, but may not break if the surface is soft like the grass in a yard. They also may have wondered why a baseball catcher's mitt is thick, but not an infielder's mitt. In physics, they learn that the stopping of a moving object requires both a force and a time to apply that force.

The product of the applied force and the stopping time is called the "impulse." As the impulse is the product of the force and the time, the longer the stopping time is, the smaller will be the force needed to stop the object. Since the baseball catcher cannot move backward when he catches the baseball, the mitt is thick to protect his hand. An infielder can move his hand backward as the ball is caught, which increases the time to stop the ball and lessens the force on his hand.

Applying this information to a physics experiment, the students are asked to design a container that will catch a falling raw egg and prevent it from breaking or cracking. The container materials they choose cannot exceed four inches in height – the egg must be stopped by whatever materials the students choose to fill their container with. The egg is dropped from the stands in our football field (about 25 feet above the container). When it reaches the container about one second later, it is moving at about 35 feet per second (about 25 mph), so to catch it safely is quite a challenge!

Students have been successful using marshmallows, layers of sliced bread, dryer lint, and even pillows brought from home! The experiment is great fun, and as the teacher I enjoy the extraordinary creativity they bring to the challenge.
